Need To Know

How to apply for permanent residence permits in China

ACCORDING to the Law of the People's Republic of China on Control of the Entry and Exit of Aliens, foreigners can visit China for a short stay, prolonged residence and permanent residence. Foreigners will be issued visas which are valid for up to a year for short stays like travelling, visiting family members and doing business in China. Those who study, work and invest in China will be issued residence permits or visas that are valid for one to five years. Foreigners are eligible for permanent residence in China upon approval by the related authorities of the Chinese government. If they get permanent residence permits, they can exit and enter the country without getting a Chinese visa. The following materials are required for a foreigner to apply for a permanent residence permit: a completed application form, a valid passport or counterpart credential, a health certificate issued by a hygiene quarantine agency designated by the Chinese government or by a foreign hygiene medical agency authorized by the Chinese embassy or consulate in that country. A certificate of no criminal record in the country concerned as issued by the Chinese embassy or consulate in that country, four recently-taken 2-inch bareheaded and full-faced photos. Applicants for permanent residence in China should apply and submit materials to the Shanghai Exit-Entry Bureau at 1500 Minsheng Road, Pudong New Area. They can go through all of the procedures by themselves or entrust authorized entities such as a relative, national authorities or law offices. Materials of applicants under the age of 18 should be submitted by their parents or authorized entities. In the case of applying through attorneys or authorized entities, applicants should write and sign letters of attorney. If attorneys are their relatives, applicants should point out their family relations and why they entrust them to apply.

Q: My wife and I are Canadians. Both of us hold international driving permits. Do we need to get a Chinese driving license?
— Cui Ying

A: According to Chinese law, foreigners holding international driving permits who want to drive in China should take a driving test to get a Chinese driving license issued by public security authorities. Otherwise, they will be considered unlicensed drivers and face legal action. Foreigners should carry their residence permits, passports and physical examination certificates to apply for a driving test. They will get a Chinese driving license after passing all of the subjects.

Q: One of my foreign friends has received a full scholarship granted by the Chinese government. How can they apply for a study visa?
— Zhou Zhou

A: For students who have got full scholarship granted by the Chinese government, they can apply for visas at the Chinese embassy or consulate in their own country, with required materials. Applicants should carry the original documents and one photocopy of each including the admission letter, Visa Application for Studying in China (JW201) and physical examination certificate. Applicants are also required to hold a valid passport. Those who plan to study in China for more than six months should apply for the "X" visa and those who plan to study in China for six months or less should apply for the "F" visa. Scholarship holders must submit the original documents and the copies of the above mentioned documents. Students who come to China with other types of passports, visas or without the original documents will not be able to register with institutions nor apply for a residence permit in China.
